Govinda plays a poor second-hand bookshop owner who is so bitter and unhappy with his life that he starts fantasizing that he is an actor and plans to make a comeback in films. When he loses everything and is forced to ask his friend to take over the shop, he believes that this will be the end of his aspirations. Govinda was supposed to star in the film in a key role, but the director thought his character was not believable. In it, you meet four friends: the magical Scribble Moon, who wears magical shoes; Sunny, the little sun; Dorothy, who wears 'books' on her head; and Dick, who is small and has a bad tummy. They're being chased by a large snail. It's a fun story. And yes, Dick's name is actually Dick. No, I'm not screwing up by publishing a post about a book that, for the first time, will actually be available for free. I'm in the middle of converting images and text files from a piece of software I used to use to a system that works with newer versions of the program. Why is this so hard? I'm just doing a simple project for work, and it's turning into a mammoth mess. My pay-to-write book, THE WORLD OF DICK AND DOROTHY, is due to be released in September. I've now got around ten days before the deadline. No, I haven't given up. I've just taken a little break. I don't want to spend all my time doing stuff that I can't sell. And I've decided to take a break from everything else I'm doing and concentrate on just my book. I'll have more to say when the book is released. Anyway, the above-mentioned software can convert image files, but it can't make the images work when you're in a web browser. So I've 82157476af
